In 1905, when Conway Stewart was founded, Jarvis and Garner had a single aim, to produce elegant yet functional writing instruments. Today, one hundred years later, the company still holds true to these original goals. Each pen is individually turned, assembled and polished. The company uses only the richest materials and solid 18-karat gold nibs and bands. All of the writing instruments come with a 100-year guarantee. Conway Stewart brand not only creates exclusive pens for many prestigious corporate and government accounts, but has been privileged to have its products chosen as official gifts of the British government.

A new era began in 1996, with the introduction of the Churchill as Conway Stewart's flagship model celebrating the life of Sir Winston Churchill. To commemorate the company's Centenary in 2005, the new 100 model was launched in various handmade resins. Through 2006, Conway Stewart produced several new designs featuring the art of fine enamel over precisely engraved sterling silver. In 2007, several new editions were introduced honoring significant British historical figures.

Conway Stewart also offers the discerning consumer a line of fine writing inks manufactured on the premises in Devon, England, as well as luxurious leather pen cases available in a choice of styles. Each of our fine leather products is embossed with the Conway Stewart Diamond logo. Handcrafted by master pen makers, the rich heritage of Conway Stewart rests in your hand every time you use one of the beautiful pens. The company strives to continue the traditional production of beautiful pens with unique British elegance, giving pleasure to those who appreciate the art of fine writing or who wish to give a gift that will provide a lifetime of pleasure.
